

Editorial Report Of Journal

WHAT WE HAVE DONE!

Mehrdad Jalalian, MD*

*Editor In Chief, Electronic Physician Journal, Mashhad, Iran.

Correspondence to:

Mehrdad Jalalian. Electronic Physician Journal, Mashhad, Iran. E-mail:
mehrdad.medic@gmail.com

Bibliographic information of this paper for citing:

Jalalian M. What we have done! Electron. Physician 2010, 2: 109-110, Available at:
<http://www.ephysician.ir/2010/109-110.pdf>

Published: 28 December 2010
© 2009-2010 Electronic Physician

We commence the third year of the publication for the Electronic Physician Journal with our journal being remarkably well-received by the university staff. Today, in addition to welcoming articles from every corner of the world, the journal is proud to introduce an editorial board consisting of contributors from almost all continents. The following demonstrates some of the journal's achievements in its two years of publication:

1. The publication of numerous academic articles ranging from original articles and reviews to case reports and letters to the editor. Most are the outcome of research conducted by specialists and super specialists.
2. The indexing and introduction of this journal in tens of regional and international database services such as Index Copernicus.
3. Applying to publish articles in other academic article-indexing services including I.S.I. and Scopus.

4. The proofreading of accepted English articles - free of charge - by outstanding native English editors. No fee is imposed on the authors for the publication of their articles. In fact, the current costs of the journal are met by advertisements and sponsors.
5. Membership of tens of university professors and researchers of health and medical science from all over the world in the editorial board in addition to contributions from numerous journal referees from such countries as England, Iran, India, Malaysia, Thailand, the U.S., United Arab Emirates, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, and Nigeria.
6. Designing the standard and accurate process, the acceptance of the articles, quick replies to authors' correspondences, and minimizing the length of the processing in the editorial board.
7. Encouraging the journal's referees to give constructive comments to authors so that the evaluation will be considered an educational experience by the authors.
8. Rapid publication of articles as soon as they are fully accepted by the editorial board.
9. Covering all health and medical fields by the journal's referees.
10. Publicizing the journal via search engines and university libraries.

None of these would be possible without the perseverance of the respected members of the editorial board, the learned scientists of the journal, and the outstanding researchers who have selected the Electronic Physician Journal for the publication of their research findings. I warmly appreciate all of them for their invaluable contributions to the improvement of the journal and I would like to wish them a very happy new year.

Dr. Mehrdad Jalalian

Editor in Chief.